SPECIAL REPORT

9 months of 'some bumps' for city's mayor

Lawsuits pile up; GOP puts up fight

By Chris Sikich

Chris.Sikich@Topics.com

September 23, 2004

LAWRENCE -- Mayor Deborah Cantwell is a recreational weightlifter, but her first nine months as the city's top leader has involved what some might describe as heavy lifting.

Since the 40-year-old took office in January, the city has filed a lawsuit over water rates, three police officers sued her, and two different officers and the city are facing a federal lawsuit charging violation of civil rights. The Democratic mayor also said her relationship with Lawrence Republicans has been tougher than expected, especially the GOP-controlled city council.

Despite the challenges, like any weightlifter she is managing the stress.

"I think it's gone pretty well, but we have had some bumps in the road," Cantwell said. "You have to expect that when the last mayor served for 16 years and a Democrat has never held the office. I'm sure there will be more to come."

The challenges caused Regina Dillard, 45, of Lawrence, to voice support for the mayor in a letter to the editor in July.

"I knew going into her election she was going to catch a lot of heat," Dillard said. "No. 1, she's a female and, No. 2, a Republican held that position for so long."

Dillard, vice president of Communication Workers of America Local 4900, felt a connection to Cantwell's troubles.

"I truly understand what it is like for someone to be a first," she said. "I'm the first elected black officer in my local."

Dillard said it's time for fighting between Lawrence Republicans and Democrats to stop.

"It's human nature to say the election is over, so let's move on and get to the business at hand," she said. "People who are successful are able to do that, and people who can't do that end up disappearing (from public life) because people get tired of the finger-pointing."

Dillard goes to Indianapolis City-County Council meetings regularly, and plans to attend more Lawrence council meetings. She went to one this year and was disappointed in the turnout. She hopes more minorities will take an interest in Lawrence government.

"I was surprised, but not surprised, to see there were only two black people," she said. "I was No. 2 out of maybe 80 people in that room."

Yet, 80 is a big crowd for council meetings, and Cantwell now sits with the audience. Since Lawrence became a second-class city this year, the mayor no longer leads the meeting or sits at the front table with the council. The council president now presides over meetings.

Cantwell and the council Sept. 7 ended months of wrangling over city employees' salaries. Initially, Cantwell proposed salaries, then the council passed its own proposal and she vetoed it.

Such "alley fights," Paul Whitehead said, have made the last nine months rough. The Republican took over as Lawrence council president this year and is in his 17th year on the governing body. He is also a 35-year veteran of Indianapolis Police Department.

"We've certainly had our moments of conflict and consternation," he said. "It's a matter of both sides trying to come to grips with what their goals are. Hopefully the end results of all our actions and interaction will make the citizens the winner, not one group or party."

Utility rates change family's summer habits

Former council president George Keller, who was defeated in last November's election, said afterward that Cantwell's quest to lower water bills might have caused Republicans to lose the mayor's race and three council seats.

Lawrence Utilities raised water rates in 2002-2004 to upgrade the private utility. It provides sewer, sanitation and water services for 15,000 households and businesses, and its contract could extend 50 years.

"One of my most important goals is to get the utility back and to get water rates reduced," Cantwell said.

She filed a lawsuit to cut the utility's ties with the city.

Customers of the utility saw no rate increases 1988-2001. When rate increases were passed, the intent was for an 85 percent increase; but, by stacking a 30 percent increase in 2002, a 30 percent increase in 2003 and a 25 percent increase in 2004, Cantwell said rates were raised too high.

"The rates were actually raised about 110 percent (over three years)," she said.

Cantwell said the rate increase should have been spread out over a longer period of time. She said Lawrence Utilities should be part of Indiana Utility Regulatory Commission, which oversees rates.

The former all-Republican Lawrence council briefly tried to take control of the water issue last year, but tabled its proposal under pressure from Cantwell. A meeting room filled with utility customers backed

He said he voted for Cantwell because she promised to lower utility bills. He was upset the council tried to lessen Cantwell's ability to fulfill her goal.

"They did not want to turn the keys over to her," he said. "I didn't appreciate that."

Gammon said his family of five pays $120 a month to the utility.

"I suspect wrongdoing," he said. "Something doesn't click there because there is no reason I should be spending that much money. My dad in Indianapolis pays $30 for his water bill."

Gammon said he cut back on water use this summer to save money: No lawn watering. No running the faucet while shaving. Less laundry.

The family even cut the movie channels from its cable-TV package to pay the higher utility bills.

Gammon opened a low-carbohydrate grocery earlier this month on Pendleton Pike, and he hopes the water bill doesn't dig into his pockets. The first bill hadn't arrived last week.

"We don't have any idea what to expect," he said. "We don't use water at all, except to wash our hands or for the restroom, so it shouldn't be that high."

Whitehead, the Republican council president, said the council could still raise and lower water rates even though the utility is privately managed, but he said the process is complicated. He said the council let the mayor take the lead for now.

"What we have is a legal snarl that has developed, and only because a lot of good people continue to operate the utility on a day-to-day basis does it continue to function," he said.

Mike Lawson, former mayor Tom Schneider's deputy mayor, manages the private utility. He had said the rate hikes were necessary, but he now has no comment.

"In light of the pending lawsuit with the city, we are not making any comments whatsoever regarding the administration or Mayor Cantwell," he said.

Mayor, others muster efforts to put art at fort

Cantwell hopes to redevelop the area along Pendleton Pike and Franklin Road, and wants to add an arts district to the former Fort Benjamin Harrison.

The arts district could be closer to being reality after the Fort Benjamin Harrison Reuse Authority switched to Democrats' control this year.

Cantwell hopes to use the fort theater, built in 1929, as one of the art district's cornerstones.

She is no stranger to art. She has a bachelor's degree of fine arts from the Art Institute of Chicago and goes to a watercolor-painting class every Friday morning at Indianapolis Art Center.

Cantwell is also wants to see other improvements in Lawrence. She is working on a plan to net $750,000 each of the next 15 years for redevelopment of Pendleton Pike and Franklin Road. She hopes to upgrade infrastructure like sidewalks, curbs, streetlights and signs for businesses and residences on the two corridors. New businesses would also receive income-tax credits for coming to the area.

A law create the Community Redevelopment Enhancement District goes before city council at 6:30 p.m. Oct. 4 and, if passed, will go to the state for approval Oct. 13.

Early changes upset chain of command

Cantwell has faced several challenges within her own staff.

- Her deputy mayor and public safety director, Debra Jarvis, left in February. Cantwell cited a personality conflict and the need to cut the budget. Jarvis would have been paid $60,000 this year, city documents show.

A new deputy mayor and public safety director, David Rapp, was hired Sept. 1. He was a Lawrence firefighter from 1973-1999 before retiring with medical disability. He worked from 2001-2004 as a Noblesville Fire Department division chief. His salary is $60,000, but he said it comes from a different budget than Jarvis's.

- Jerry Smolek, a consultant who was interim city controller, resigned in February.

- Sharon Arnold resigned in July as chief of staff/economic development director after it was reported she was delinquent on about $10,000 in property taxes. Her husband, William, had just resigned as deputy controller after the Lawrence council voted to move money that covered his salary to a public-safety fund.

Cantwell likes the configuration of her current staff and believes it will be stable.

"I hope so," she said.

Bureaucracy in public safety gains attention

Cantwell also pledged to reduce bureaucracy levels at the Police and Fire departments to get more officers on the streets.

The mayor is no stranger to public safety. She was a Lawrence Township firefighter for 13 years before retiring in 2003 with a medical disability. She served as an at-large member on the firefighters union in 2000-03.

Since taking office, she has appointed new chiefs in each department and eliminated management positions at the Police Department to get more officers on the streets. She also created a clearer chain of command for the Fire Department and wants to add a Spanish-speaking liaison to serve both -- that was a campaign pledge -- but said there was no room in this year's budget.

"I'm hoping we have room to put that position in next year's budget because there is a big need for it in the police and fire departments," she said. "We have a high number of Spanish-speaking people living throughout the city."

But, other police matters have the potential to pull even more money from the public-safety budget: Two lawsuits.

The Lawrence government and two police officers are facing one lawsuit over an incident that occurred in January before Cantwell appointed James Parish police chief and began reorganizing the department.

The Indianapolis Star reported Sept. 1 that Richard Smith, of Lawrence, filed a federal lawsuit saying two Lawrence police officers, sergeants Larry Jones and Travis Cline, violated Smith's civil rights during a search of his home in January.

Marion County Prosecutor's Office spokesperson Rick Van Ness said his office had already investigated the claim and "found no criminal culpability."

Cantwell also is being sued by three of the demoted police officers: Charles Fitzwater, Lana Schneider and Jack Bailey. Fitzwater and Schneider had been deputy chiefs and Bailey had been a captain. The three are now lieutenants and are seeking a return to rank and back pay. Schneider is the former mayor's wife.

The case had been in Marion County courts, but Cantwell's administration succeeded in having the lawsuit moved to federal court. The officers' lawyer, John Kautzman, said he has asked for the case to be moved back to county court. No court dates or hearings had been set on Kautzman's request.

Cantwell said many police appointments during former mayor Schneider's administration were made politically, and she wants rank to be set by merit. She said, overall, officers seem to be adjusting.

"It's difficult for some people that have been in a certain culture for a long time," she said. "It's not going to sit well with some people, but I hope over time it will prove to be a better system."

IN HER OWN WORDS

Lawrence Mayor Deborah Cantwell speaks to the city council Sept. 7. Before this year, the mayor sat with the council and presided over the meeting.

Topics Newspapers invited Mayor Deborah Cantwell to sum up progress on her goals:

Arts Center at Fort Harrison

One of the cornerstones of the "arts center" will be the theater built in 1929 next to the Sterrett Center on Otis Avenue. The city is acquiring ownership from the Fort Harrison Reuse Authority. The city plans to have live theater groups, film festivals and seminars in the theater. Another facility to house art classes, a gallery and community rooms is being researched.

Lower water rates and city-owned utility

Less than 6 months into office, I initiated litigation to terminate a contract entered into by the prior administration with a private utility less than 72 hours old, created by former city employees, that could have lasted for 50 years at exorbitant rates. The city is seeking to also disqualify the Ice Miller law firm from representing the private utility against the city, its former client.

Redevelopment of Pendleton Pike and Franklin Road

My administration and the city's economic- development advisory committee are planning to implement a Community Revitalization Enhancement District along Pendleton Pike and Franklin Road. This would allow the city to capture up to $750,000 per year for 15 years in sales tax and income tax for district enhancements and infrastructure improvements while giving new businesses locating to the area and current businesses making improvements up to a 25 percent income-tax credit. Council approval is needed to pass a law to create the district.

Do your part for the environment & help reduce Lawrence's waste disposal costs. Find out what You can do to help preserve our environment! Recycling reduces acid rain, global warming and air pollution, while conserving valuable natural and energy resources.

The City of Lawrence and the Lawrence Recycling Committee urge residents to participate in the Lawrence Curbside Recycling Program. Curbside pickup of recyclables is provided to residents as part of the City of Lawrence's waste management services. Recycling benefits the environment and saves money.

Recycling of aluminum reduces manufacturing energy use by 95%. The Container Recycling Institute says that the 36 billion aluminum cans land-filled last year had a value of more than $600 million.

Recycling 1 ton of paper saves the equivalent of 17 trees, 6953 gallons of water, 463 gallons of oil, 587 pounds of air pollution, 3.06 cubic yards of landfill space and 4077 kilowatt hours of energy. Recycling paper reduces air pollution by 74%, water pollution by 35%, energy use by 64% and water use by 58%.

Recycling a ton of steel saves 2500 pounds of iron ore, 1000 pounds of coal and 40 pounds of limestone.

Recycling a ton of glass saves 1,330 lbs. of sand, 433 lbs. of soda ash, 433 lbs. of limestone, 151 lbs. of feldspar, and energy use is reduced by 25-32%.

QUESTIONS? CALL (317) 823-8959. Please place your recycling bag and other recyclable materials near your trash by 6:00 a.m. on your regular trash collection day. Remember, recycling is picked up bi-weekly. Your recycling counts! For more information about recycling or the City of Lawrence's other waste management services, call (317) 823-8959.

City of Lawrence Sanitation Department

Telephone Number 317-823-8959

Trash is picked up weekly (door to door service). All refuse is placed at curb line by 6:00 a.m. on the day of service. Limit of refuse: Each resident is allowed six (6) bags or containers of refuse.

Yard waste: The City picks up leaves and yard waste in paper yard waste bags from May 1st to the end of November. These are taken to a compost facility.

Heavy pickup: The first pickup of each month residents are allowed to put out two (2) heavy items. This could be appliances or furniture. We do not pickup any type of building materials or construction or demolition debris.

Rules and Regulations for Trash and Garbage Collection

REGULATIONS: To receive collection service, the householder must comply with the following regulations:

1. All refuse must be placed at the curb line in proper containers by 6:00 a.m. on collection day.
2. The pickup limits of bags, bundles, and/or containers is 6 per week at each residence unless the Department of Sanitation has authorized a deviation from this provision.
3. Metal or plastic containers may not be less than 5 gallons or larger than 30 gallon capacity. All reusable containers should have adequate handles.
4. Plastic refuse bags of 2 mil-thickness or heavier, approved by the Sanitation Department, may be used in lieu of metal or plastic can. Such bags may be purchased at many retail stores.

5. Cardboard is weakened or disintegrated by rain or snow. For this reason, heavy trash placed in cardboard boxes will not be collected, nor will trash be picked up if the plastic refuse bags are torn.

6. All refuse must be in approved containers, with the exception of newspapers, wood scraps, and tree and/or shrubbery trimmings, which may be securely tied in bundles. These bundles may not exceed 3 feet in length and 3 feet in girth.

7. Garbage, properly drained and wrapped, may be placed in the same container with trash.

8. Broken glass and sharp metal fragments, if wrapped well in plastic or paper bags, may be placed in the same container with trash.

9. To prevent scattering, loose paper should be placed in closed receptacles.

10. Garbage will not be collected if it is frozen to the container or to the ground.

11. No medical waste.

Board of Public Works and Safety Meeting Schedule

All Board of Public Works and Safety meetings will be held at 4:00 p.m. in the Public Assembly Room of the Lawrence Government Center, 9001 East 59th Street, Lawrence, Indiana. The meetings are generally the second and fourth Thursday of the month.
